

Cornelia Holthausen

Cornelia Holthausen is Deputy Director General in the Directorate General Market Operations of the European Central Bank in Frankfurt. She is responsible for a range of issues related to money markets and the operational framework of the Eurosystem, including counterparty and collateral frameworks as well as liquidity management.

Before this, Cornelia was Head of the ECB's Financial Research Division, leading a team of researchers on financial research topics relevant to central banking. During her 17 years at the ECB, she has worked on the design of central banks' operational frameworks, money markets, micro- and macro-prudential regulation of the financial sector, and the economics of payments.

Holthausen has published in The Review of Financial Studies, the Journal of Money, Credit, and Banking, the Journal of Financial Intermediation and in other journals. She is an affiliate member of the Centre for Economic Policy Research.

Cornelia graduated with a PhD in Economics from Pompeu Fabra University, Barcelona. She completed part of her doctoral studies at the Wharton School, Philadelphia.